Canada Firm In IOC Talks

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Despite reported threats to cancel the Olympics, Canada won't change its stand on Taiwanese participation in the games at today's talks with the International Olympic Committee, a high level external affairs department spokesman said.

The spokesman said late Friday it was expected the IOC would agree today to Canadian terms because the country's position remains "clear and firm."

Tanzania meanwhile, with-drew from the Games Friday because New Zealand is taking part, a government state-ment said.

A dozen mothers and children outfaced a backhoe operator on Victoria International Airport property Friday—and delayed the smashing of a building they want to use.

And their action was rewarded with at least a temporary stay-of-execution for the deserted building on Beacon Avenue just off the Pat Bay Highway.

"We had complete confidence the operator wouldn't run over children and mothers," she said.

The confrontation however didn't come to that. The operator of the front-end loader said he would work on clean-up until he was ordered to demolish the building.

And after meeting with the group later in the morning, airport Manager Jim Mills agreed to indefinitely halt the demolition at least until the association has had a chance to present a brief to MoT officials outlining its reasons for wanting the facilities.

Director of the guidance association Barry Wyckham said it would take about two weeks to prepare the brief. The guidance association is a group of people on the

The wild horse kill — the biggest that civilian experts here said they have ever seen or heard of — has caused a general uneasiness because of Dugway's primary military mission, which is to test and

We Still Don't Know

British Columbia penitentiary classification officer Mary Steinhauser's death was unnatural and accidental leaves the Times with uneasy feelings. After eight hours of deliberation the jury said the six-man tactical team that burst in on the convicts, one of whom held a knife at Steinhauser's throat, were justified in their actions. It is undoubtedly true that had the three desperate convicts not barricaded themselves and taken hostages, Steinhauser would be alive today. That is analogous to saying that if Louis Riel hadn't fomented a Metis rebellion he wouldn't have been hung in Regina.

Admittedly, the jury had a difficult decision to make. Who were they to believe: six members of the tactical squad who had no sleep for upwards of 50 hours before the incident took place or three convicted and desperate prison inmates? Nor did the jury have access to the findings of the Farris inquiry into the incident, at the request of coroner Doug Jack, who wanted the jury to have a fresh perspective on the incident. Whether or not the jury should have seen the still secret inquiry report is a debatable point.

Yet certain unavoidable facts must be faced. Mary Steinhauser was killed

The coroner's jury decision that by bullets fired by a member or members of the tactical squad. In the denouement of this tragedy the public does not even know who fired the fatal shot. An innocent person was shot to death by some unknown prison guards. Perhaps that satisfies the letter of the law, but not the public requirement of the right to know. The jury put it this way: "The bullet which killed Miss Mary Steinhauser came from the gun of a member of the tactical squad; their action was precipitated by inmate Andy Bruce because he held Miss Steinhauser between himself and the tactical squad in a manner leading the technical squad to believe that her life was in immediate jeopardy from his

> If Steinhauser's life was in danger why did the guards fire? When an innocent hostage is threatened with bodily violence by a desperate convict, it would seem like a good time to back off. It is also true that the tactical squad had little or no rest for at least 50 hours. It is also true that splitsecond judgments with life or death consequences had to me made by these men. Mitigating circumstances abound. The jury added that its findings attached responsibility to both the tactical squad and Andrew

Bruce but, "... we find that the tactical squad was justified in their actions in as much as they acted in the line of duty in the firm belief that they were acting to save Miss Steinhauser's life."

While the jury was careful not to blame anybody outright, it did recommend that future penitentiary incidents should be invested in a trained outside body, not a special squad of prison guards. An interim squad, to act before the outside squad arrived should be composed of non-custodial staff. In other words penitentiary guards should not be used in emotionally charged emergency situations involving convicts. There are some subtle and far-reaching implications in such a statement.

To go back to our original statement of uneasiness about this whole incident, we still know little more than the day after the tragedy. The six-man jury had a difficult job which it has carried out fairly and carefully But nothing will change the fact that an innocent woman was shot. Following a federal inquiry and a coroner's jury we still don't know who shot this. woman. More than one year and two years ago in San Francisco I listened to Lawrence Ferlinghetti read his poetry in a small club called the Cellar.

His City Lights publishing company was churning out little paperback editions of Jack Kerouac, Allen Ginsberg, William Carlos Williams, Gregory Corso and the legendary Neal Cassady, hero of Kerouac's On the Road.

One could slip into the City Lights book ore, pick up the latest volume, rush across Broadway to Enrique's and enjoy a fulsome glass of cold California chablis as you read new revelations. "I've seen the best minds of my generation destroyed by madness, starving hysterical naked, dragging themselves through the negro streets at dawn looking for an angry fix," wrote Ginsberg in Howl, 10 years before the drug culture took hold.

Close by at the Jazz Workshop, John Coltrane, Sonny Stitt and Wes Montgomery could be heard playing a set. A little further on Carmen MacRae was singing her sardonic ballads backed by a fine trio at Sugar Hill.

At two a.m. when the clubs closed Broadway was jammed with people carrying quarts of beer or jugs of wine, intent on an endless night.

Today the same thoroughfare is jammed with nervous tourists eyeballing gar-ish neon enticing them into pornographic film houses, massage parlors and nude dancing acts. Except for the Matador, the John Coltrane, Wes Montgomery, Jack Kerouac and Neal Cassady are dead. The beat has stopped.

But every once in a while Allen Ginsberg or Lawrence Ferlinghetti surfaces again. Their intense yet gentle poetry is a reminder that passion and conscience are alive and well in America.

And so it was Monday night at Vic-toria's Belfry, the old Fernwood United Church built in 1897 which serves poets now as well it served God in the past. A group that calls itself the Pacific Life Community sponsored a benefit reading to protest the Trident submarine-missile base, featuring local poets and Ferlinghet-

The Poor Old Republicans

WASHINGTON - The saddest characters in Washington these days are the Republican members of congress. They are watching the Ford-Reagan fight for the GOP presidential nomination with mounting alarm, fearing that whoever wins this battle will divide the party, lose the White House, and weaken their chances of re-election in November.

Their situation now is bleak enough.
The Democrats have held a majority of the house of representatives and senate for 22 consecutive years, and for 39 out of the last 43 years. But with President Gerald Ford in the White House, they have at least been able, with the aid of conser vative Democrats, to sustain 17 of Ford's 21 vetoes over the last two years.

Now everything seems to be going against them. Not only the popularity polls in the presidential election, which favor Jimmy Carter over either Ford or Ronald Reagan. Not only the trend of voting in the increasingly populous states of the South and West, which are less conservative than in the 1950s and 1960s.

But also the probable switch from moderate Democratic leaders like Mike Mansfield in the senate and speaker Carl Albert in the house to more partisan Democratic leaders like Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, and Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts in the house.

Depressing Scandals

It would be hard to underestimate the importance of what is happening on Capitol Hill. While the political attention of the nation is on the presidential race, the shifting scene in congress could be equally or even more important in the rest of the 1970s.

The mood of congress is obviously changing. Resignations are higher than ever before. The sex scandals have depressed members and their staffs almost as much as the Watergate scandal depressed the executive branch and the bureaucracy and this is now coming out in the open in a conflict between what's left of the Republican leadership on the hill and the coming Democratic speaker of the house

For example, John J. Rhodes of Arizona, the Republican leader of the house, and normally a most cautious and courteous man, has just written the most critical book on congress that has appeared in a very long time.

He calls it The Futile System, and in his personal attacks on O'Neill indicates the coming partisan struggle in the house of Rhodes deplores the decline of civility in congress in recent years and the rise o personal and partisan acrimony, but he is not exactly civil or impersonal himself.

'The atmosphere in and around the congress today," he says, "is far more acrid than at any time in my career (he was elected to the 83rd congress on Nov. 4, 1952). The members are louder, more up-

When he came to congress in 1952, he observes, the house and senate had a combined staff of 4,500 and an annual budget of $42 million. Now, the staff is 16,000 with a budget of $414 million. But looking to the future, it is the personal comments of Rhodes that may be most important.

He describes speaker Albert, who has mounced his retirement, as a "weak, inefficient" but fair leader and goes on to denounce O'Neill who will undoubtedly replace Albert, as "the most partisan man

Rhodes says that O'Neill is "a gregarious and engaging man," but adds: "He would rather go down to defeat time after time and veto after veto than ever to co-operate substantively with either the minority side or the Republican president

Rhodes's argument is precisely the op-- that a Democratic government under Carter and a Democratic congress under Tip O'Neill in the House and Bob Byrd or Hubert Humphrey leading the senate would be a tidy disaster.

Economic Cowards

To understand the economic climate in British Columbia, we can go back as a starting point to the prosperous years of the 1920s just prior to the stock market

The large corporations were strong in the forest industry, transportation and mining.

During this period B.C. had a large base of small business operations. There were the small farmers, owner-operated fishing boats and small mining operations.

catastrophe economically but the economic attitudes of British Columbians were shaken to their roots. "Economic cowards" were produced in assembly line fashion. There was very little confidence in the gamble of free enterprise as a way economic survival. The financia careers of men were directed towards the protective umbrellas of labor unions, corporations and government. These were protective and government. These were ideal livelihoods in which to hide under an economic blanket of continuity, security and hypnotic bliss for twenty years or so

Realizing our immediate problem it will be necessary to our economic planning that financial support be given for the establishment of small manufacturing and other secondary industry projects

The "economic cowards" produced by our current system can only be rehabilitated through a stable growth of business opportunities, through the exciting adventure of free enterprise.—Robert L. Henshaw, 3435 Yorkshire Place.

Unresolved Dispute

Because of the unresolved dispute between the school board and the municipality of Oak Bay, many Oak Bay students will have to either forego a swim-ming program or be bused to other municipalities in September even though the Oak Bay recreation centre will be available and accessible to all of them. During the past school year the Willows PTA paid for much of the cost of swimm ing instruction for Willows School children by funds raised through volunteer efforts. We were naturally very disappointed when the school board and the municipality of Oak Bay were unable to reach agreement over the rental of facilities and thus caused the swimming program to be ter-minated in the middle of the year.

Over the past two months, I have spoken on a number of occasions to the mayor of Oak Bay, Brian Smith and during this period of time I have tried to remain as objective as possible. On July 7 I attended a meeting of the Oak Bay council and was left with the impression that the council has made and is making every effort to be fair and reasonable in this matter. In addition note that they do not hesitate to state their I understand that the school board must represent the interests of several municipalities which may have varying interests and varying recreational facilities but this, in my view, does not restrict or reduce the school board's responsibility to the school children of Oak Bay.

I therefore request on behalf of the 200 members of the Willows PTA that the board immediately and publicly disclose the reasons why it cannot proceed to resolve this matter so that the parents of Willows school children together with the taxpayers of Oak Bay can determine whether or not you are acting responsibily with respect to this problem. — Anne M Herbert, President, Willows PTA

Because medicare is a relatively new program, while hospital insurance dates back to the '50s, it is medicare that has been fingered for most of the blame in the dramatic recent escalation of health costs. that is responsible for threethe hospital insurance bill went up by 25 per cent last year, compared to only 12 per cent

The cost rise has been primarily the result of two factors, the first and foremost of which is wages.

Salaries represent more than 75 per cent of hospital costs. hospital workers were notoriously underpaid almost exploited in many cases. Giving them their due, howevermuch warranted, accounted for three-quarters of

Otherwise it just increases

As long as the idea of closing down hospitals, or even wards was regarded as unthinkable. there was no point to introducing lower-cost alternatives

What's more, since there was sharing for these alternate made such a shift would be saving money mainly for Ottawa rather than itself

Federal-provincial negotiations aimed at extricating the two levels of government from this mutually costly conundrum began in 1970. In June had come to force the issue.

It announced ceilings on the medicare expenditures it would cost-share from 1976 on, and gave the five years' notice required to terminate the present Hospital Insurance Act.

Initial provincial reactions ranged from apoplexy to panic Provincial health ministers the Fall when the federal inand Health Minister Marc Lalonde agreed to limit the medicare ceilings to the two remaining years of the control

As long as the income controls are in place, it is virtually impossible for increases in provincial medicare costs to exceed the 14.5 per cent maximum for 1976-77 or the 12 per cent ceiling of the following.

Before the income controls were introduced, doctors in Ontario and Alberta were calling for 35 per cent hikes in their medicare fee schedules. Faced with the $2,400 annual limit on income gains, they settled for eight and nine per cent respectively. respectively.

The significant changes in the federal Medical Care Act now are those the Health Minister added when the bill reached committee. The special cost-sharing provisions for new services which can now will enable that Act to do what the hospital insurance program can't, while a replacement for the 30-year-old Hospital Insurance Act is being negotiated.

The process of rebuilding Canada's health care system along more rational lines is exyears. Changes in provincial programs and in the eligibility of various services for federal cost-sharing will be introduced in stages as agreements are to look a Solitary Vireo in the eye. There he was, not 20 feet from me, doing what vireos have come to be known for moving slowly and deliberately or sometimes sitting quite still, only moving his head as he peered intently into the foliage that surrounded him, but singing all the time.

Occasionally he uttered sharp, annoyed alarm notes, but these seemed to have nothing to do with me. Once, just after giving vent to his feelings in this way, another vireo appeared and I got the impression they exchanged food. I took the other bird to be his mate because she quickly disappeared into the greenery and soon, from the direction in which she went, there was a flurry of buzzes and staccato notes that sounded suspiciously like a nest full of young, hungry, Solitary Vireos.

About then, a call of a different kind filtered down through the trees. Freely translated this one came through

Ethiopian Christians Choose Peasant Priest as New Leader

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY Washington Post

ADDIS ABABA - For the ADDIS ABABA — For the first time in its 1,600 year his-tory, the Ethiopian Christian Orthodox Church this week held elections for its patriarch and chose a simple peasant priest to take over its trou-bled fortune under the ountry's new socialist mili-

After a day-long ballot, the government announced that the winner among five candidates—two monks, one priest and two bishops—was 58-year-old Malaku Wolde-Michael from the southern province of Sidamo.

Not only was it the first election of an Ethiopian patriarch, previously appointed by the Emperor or the Egyptian Coptic Christian Church, but it was the first time any institution has voted for a leader since the military seized power two years ago last month and deposed the late Emperor Haile Selassie a short time later.

Since that momentous event, relations between the orthodox church and the government have been extremely strained, partly because the military has insisted upon a sharp separation of church and state and partly because adopted.

Also, the military has pursued a policy of putting he country's Christians and Moslems on an equal footing, detance of the Coptic church

The Christian establishment has come in for sharp criticism from the left for its conservative role in the countryside and its lack of social concern for the downtrodden peasantry. But it has also been under attock from the right for failing to defend the late emperor or the institution of the monarchy during the military's

NATO Troops Fumbling

WASHINGTON (WP) The U.S. Army has managed its armed units along the NATO front so poorly that their ability to go to war in a hurry has been impaired, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.— Minn.) said in releasing por-tions of a new General Ac-counting Office survey of mili-tary readiness in Europe. The GAO found that one

Division had no keys for unlocking its ammunition storage bunkers, said Humphrey in citing one exam-ple of what he called "serious mismanagement and inef-ficiency in our European forces."

He added that the administration had dipped into the NATO reserve to obtain tanks and other armored vehicles to sell to foreign nations. The reserve was "substantially re-duced between 1973 and 1975" and has not been restored, Humphrey said. The GAO found many ar-and the GAO found many armored units on the NATO line short of key personnel and experience, said Humphrey in commenting on the report dated June 30. But this lack of readiness is not always brought to commanders' attention because the reporting requirements "have been re-laxed to the point where units can almost always report themselves as combat ready," Humphrey said.

Senate aides said, the Pentagon would release only a small portion of the GAO study to the public. Part of the released report said that the Army "is actively and po-sitively pursuing" many of the problems the GAO spot-lighted.

Humphrey asked for the study in his capacity as chairman of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress and of the foreign assistance sub-committee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.
Now that the report is in hand, Humphrey said he has asked the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to call Pentagon witnesses and State Department official to appear before the committee to answer the committee to questions on readiness.

Declaring that the United States is spending about $40 billion annually "to keep up our end of the NATO military alliance," Humphrey said what is needed is not bigger priests left the Roman Catho-lic church because they were dislilusioned with the changes brought about by the Second Vatican Council, says Dr. Janice Newson, professor of sociology at Glendon Collge in Toronto.

Priests said disillusioned

Toronto.

The council, held between 1962 and 1965, liberalized church beliefs and practices, bringing in the English mass and new social programs.

In her PhD thesis, Dr. New-son interviewed 45 priests and 45 ex-priests and found many liberal after the council. When this did not occur, they left. Others felt betrayed because the church had changed cause the entroin had changed too much.

She says no records were kept of the number of priests in the Toronto diocese who left.

the classic example.

The village is a poem set in a corner of the forest of Fontainebleau 35 miles southeast of Paris, a place for lovers, both young and old.

It would be best, though, I believe, to come to Barbizon in one's youth when the senses are alive to all of the village's charms.

Visitors take up residence in cherry inns and walk in the footsteps of such masters as Brousseau, Corot and writers, Millet, Henri and Theodore too, including Robert Louis Stevenson.

Of the painters who traveled to Barbizon to set up residence, it was J. F. Millet who prepared the village for immortality with the canvases he created here.

Driven from Paris by a cho-lera epidemic and the revolu-tion, Millet attracted world attion, Millet attracted world attention as a master in the Barbizon school of painters.

Desperately poor, he prepared his canvases in a makeshift studio set up inside a peasant's house. Today, more than a century after his death it is the showplace of Barbizon, its 'wisteria-covered walls offering protection for the treasures inside.

With a population of less than 1,000, Barbizon is a favorite haunt for visitors who drive down from Paris to dine in its inns and picnic in the forest of Fontainebleau.

The Bas Breau is something special, even for France. Its rooms, once occupied by artists, now provide shelter for the weary traveler. Although expensive, they are worth every franc — just to breathe of the romance.

scene, Surrounded by tree and flowers, the Bas Breau is a canvas-come-alive, with a garden that provides fresh vegetables for the tables.

Like the inn itself, the restaurant at the Bas Breau is expensive, a meal without wine costing in the neighborhood of $40 a couple. Again, though, for the traveler who can afford such extravaance it is worth every last centime, what with a four-star rating by the French four-star rating by the French government tourist office and one star in the Michelin Guide

Guide.

Guests dine on quail legs, filet of Charolais beef served in a truffle sauce, and there are tasty chunks of veal and lamb. During the hunting season the menu at the Bas Breau lists deer, wild boar, woodcock, pheasant, partridge and snipe.

So popular is the restaurant that on a recent Sunday the proprietor, Jean-Pierre Fava, turned away more than 200 customers.

Two of the palace's outstanding features are the Cour du Cheval Blanc and its famed horseshoe staircase. As for its residents, Napoleon was chief among them. Facing the Bas Breau from an oblique position across the road is another inn of great charm, Les Pleiades, whose 15 rooms are priced from $15 to $50 a night.

Les Pleiades has enter-tained the likes of Liz Taylor, Gary Cooper, Charles Laugh-ton and Rita Hayworth, each of whom spoke glowingly of its charms. Signing the guest album, film-maker Stanley Kramer described Les Pleiades as "one of the most beautiful restaurants in Any vegetable listed in your seed catalogue as maturing in 75 days or less will fit the 75 days or less will fit the requirements, and after a little experience you can add an 80 or 85 days drop of some vegetable you particularly enjoy and know can be used after 45 to 50 days.

A few moments spent considering the late summer weather conditions (summer is from June 21 to Sept. 21) and those of early fall (Sept. 21 to Oct. 15) will help us choose suitable varieties for this section.

Mid-July air temperatures not are ideal for quick germination of all vegetable seed. Seesoil.

BACKLIGHTING

Few pictures have more impact than a dramatic backlight shot. The next time you are about to take a flower picture move around and put the sun behind the flower. With an adjustable camera, meter up close for the flower alone; with a fixed automatic make sure the flower fills most of the view-finder. For striking portraits put the sun behind the subject then add fill-in flash to light the face.

The most popular backlit subject has to be the sunset—and it's easier to photograph than you think. But don't try it unless you can look into the sunset without squinting, then just take a direct meter reading or leave your camera on "automatic" and shoot. Banks Making It Better for Women

Banks are among the largest employers of women in Canada and the conditions of employment within the industry, are therefore a subject of continuing interest.

These facts were reflected in an extensive study issued.

in an extensive study issued by the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Cana-da, for the year 1969.

Six years later, in 1975, a review of the status of women in banking was undertaken, sponsored jointly by the Advisory Council on the Status of Women and the Canadian Bankers' Association.

Results of this study were released to the public early in 1976.

Basically it is an update of the same analysis as that of the Royal Commission and it was prepared by the same au-thor, Marianne Bossen of Win-nipeg, a recognized authority

It was carried out independently of either of the spon-soring organizations and appears in the form in which it was submitted by Miss Bos-

Originally it was the intention to issue this study during International Women's Year, "to signal that important event" and to draw attention to its main objectives which were to promote equality for women in society and to create an awareness of career opportunities open to them on the basis of "equal opportuni-ty for equal commitment."

Unforseen delays length-ened the time for publication and it therefore appeared well after the close of 1975.

A few months delay, howev er, has done nothing to make the findings less relevant. And I'm sure you will be interested in a few highlights I'm going to pass on to you here.

The study points out that women employees of the Canadian chartered banks now work in a more hospitable en-vironment with greater poten-tial for training and advance-ment than they did six years

Nevertheless, Miss Bossen says, there is much to be done if the potential of women in banking is to be fully realized. She records that Canada's more than 7,000 bank branches employ about 131,700 people, of whom approximately 96,000 (or 72 per

(Here, the Canadian Bank-er's Association adds, in a footnote, that since she conducted her research the number of women taking ICB courses has passed the 50 per cent mark for a first time.)

The image of "banker" as an exclusive male occupation is on the way toward obsolescence, the study goes on to say. It also says that women have moved up into middle management positions, al-though the numbers are still

Marie spends her time des-troying the myths that sur-round high-fashion models. "I don't follow fashlon," she says. "I wear what I like. My makeup has been the same for years. I don't care. I do what feels right for me."

It must work, because Marie has been picking and

We'd like to say that the basic rule in taking care of cacti is: "carefully." Although these are probably the most hassle-free and hardy of all the various plan families, you do have to be extra careful in handling them, howev-er, making sure you place them in your brightest window, watering them only when very, very dry and then keeping your hands off unless erotic elements of the story.

The sailor is the second of lush brass bed of a beautiful young widow who runs an an-tique shop in Dartmouth. She is suffering through the pu-berty of her only child — a coming-on handsome boy who is a member of a club of frigheningly organized school-mates who believe in the 'perfection of purity" and in the insufferable weaknesses of adult morality. The boys practice rather nasty forms of discipline upon each other and discuss how they'll even their scores with their parents. In the film's most uncomfortable sequence, they carve up a doped cat, "Sometimes it becomes necessary", says the band's chief, "to take things apart to find the truth to find the boys watch, horrified and fasapart, and tears out the heart. "You've seen life", he says arrogantly, "posing as a cat." This act is the prelude to their move against the grown-up enemy. When the sailor and the boy's mother announce their plans for mar-riage, after several days and nights of torrid love-making all clinically documented by her son, the band feels the sailor has betrayed his com-pact with the sea. His choice for a landlubber's life, they decide, is "tampering with the perfection of orders." As he tells them of his battle with a hurricane off the coast of South America, they pour him drugged tea, and prepare to extract his heart.

Apart from the particular ugliness of the plot, the movie suffers from the performances of Sara Miles and Kris Kristofferson. For an actress ed range. Her eyes and mouth gape open, and it means ei-ther that she's feeling whiney and pathetic and on the verge of hysterics, or that she's rap-turously grateful for whatever attentions are being bestowed upon her. There are few actresses who work so hard and express so little. The best thing about Kris Kristofferson in this movie is the curve of his naked back in the lamplight.

Robert Altman is, for many of us, one of America's most original and inventive direc-tors. Nobody else in movies today seems to know as much as Altman about how to create atmosphere — he hooks us in on his eccentric supporting characters, the half-audible sound track that half-audible sound track that keeps us listening closely, the elaborate, busy, background action. Altman seems always to be on the verge of making a major film — but he never quite pulls it off. Maybe it's because he's often his own writer and his enthusiansm for the piece overrides his obfor the piece overrides his objectivity and good sense, or maybe he's more interested in the effects of spontaneity and improvisation than he is in content and structure.

His latest film, Buffalo Bill and the Indians or Sitting Bull's History Lesson, is a case in point. The first half is enormous fun — it's exciting and vigorous filmmaking. Alt-man catches us up in the adventure and the show business extravaganza of Willian Cody's Wild West Show. Buffalo Bill wants Chief Sitting Bull for an act but the negotiations are causing him no end of anguish. The old Indian, whose name had once struck terror in the hearts of God-fearing, heathen-hating Americans, knows his worth, and he strikes a tough bargain. It's all a question of cost-benefit, and Cody isn't sure he can cope, with the old man's style or his demands. The action bounds along, and everyone, from the show's manager to the animal keepers, offers an opinion on how to use the Indian. Nobody reckons that he may have an story in the second half, abandoning structure and cohesi-veness for polemics. What peters out into a half-hearted swipe at Bicentennial 'good will, peace and brotherhood'. In a dream sequence, Bill Cody stills about in his wight. Cody stalks about in his nightshirt, muttering ruefully about the West to the ghost of Sitting Bull. The scene leaves us stranded, and pessimistic about the film's outcome.

Altman's conclusion confirms our disenchantment—
the White Man, in the person of Buffalo Bill (Paul Newman) stands supreme over the Red Man, and Cody's eyes Altman's movies make it hard for admirers to remain com-placent — when he's good, he is very, very good but when he's bad, he's terrible.

around now called Mother Jugs one Speed that is so ugly that it should be briefly noted as a warning. Bill Cosby, Raquel Welch and Harvey Keitel star as the employees of a shifty operator who runs an ambulance service in L.A. The story starts out in slap stick fashion with the drivers drinking, doping, terrifying pedestrians, and stealing bodies from rival companies, and then it shifts into low gear for some really dirty ac-tion. There's a rape of an at-tempted suicide, stoned-out in the back of the "bus," a gris-ly murder by shot-gun at close-range, a just-birthed mother bleeding to death on the way to County Hospital. After all this, there's an attempt to revive the comedy, and the movie ends with a pseudo-comic shoot-out and a bow to "equal opportunity employers" (Raquel gets to drive). Is everybody satisf-ied? I don't think so. The audience's laughter had and hysterical edge to it as if they had to do something to get their money's worth.

PAY TELEVISION

The Honorable Jeanne Sauve, Minister of Communica tions, in a speech on June 2nd, 1976, concluded that: "the continued federal regulation of the broadcasting system, including the regulation of pay television, is a crucial factor in the coherent and orderly provision of program services to the entire Canadian viewing public." The Minister stated in her address that it would be a major task to devise a structure to maximize pay television's potential benefits for the Canadian broadcasting system while achieving three major objectives:

 It must provide a range of programming which does not duplicate that now offered by broad-casters and must do so without siphoning programs from the broadcasting system.

2. It must ensure the production of high-quality Canadian programs which Canadians will watch;

3. It must ensure that programs are produced in Canada for international sale.

In her speech the Minister also indicated that consideration should be given as to whether the pay television agency should be "a private corporation with extensive monopoly powers, a public corporation or a mixed corporation, involving both private and public par-

The Minister has requested that the Commission receive submissions concerning the development of a pay TV program agency. Accordingly, the Commission calls for $\ensuremath{\mathsf{TV}}$ submissions on the form and function of an organization, institution or agency to assemble, produce and acquire programming for distribution to licensed broadcast un-dertakings for pay television on a national or regional basis in English and in French.

All submissions should be received by the Commission on or before September 1st, 1976. Guy Lefebvre,

JEFFERSON . . . STARSHIP

"Spittine" Coming off a platinum album, the only real question facing the former Jefferson Airplane is whether they can sustain the energy that made sustain the energy that made "Red Octopus" such a remarkable success. Although "Spitfire" is somewhat looser than the earlier album, and while it lacks a hit single as terrific as "Miracles" the answer is decidedly yes. The voc a linterplay between Grace Slick and Marty Balin is as impressive now as it was is as impressive now as it was at the beginning of the San Francisco rock eraze, and young guitarist Craig Chaqui co remains a most impressive newcomer on that overworked

TALS: "Reggae Got Soul"

Lead singer Toots Hibbert owns one of popular music's most compelling voices, Unmost companing voices. Ori-fortunately, his second Ameri-can album tends toward a certain facelessness, as the Maytals' waver toward soul, largely discarding their original reggae stance. Still, the fundamentals of the Maytals' great style remain constant, great style remain constant, and on such songs as the reg-gae classic, "Six and Seven Books," and "Rastaman' and "Living in the Ghetto" Hib-bert sings with all the fervor and conviction of old—no one can ask for more than that.

- * * * AMAZING RHYTHM ACES:

"Too Stuffed to Jump"
A disappointing follow-up to the Aces' first album, which contained the undeniably clas-sic single, "Third Rate Ro-mance," "Too Stuffed to Jump" feels for the most part like nothing more than cleverly contrived Southern boogie formula. Russell Smith remains an engaging lyricist and a better singer — and if there's a memorable tune here, it's his "Typical Ameri-can Boy.' But until they come up with another tune like "Third Rate Romance — or preferably an album's worth of them - the Aces remain merely promising. * * *

NATALIE COLE: "Natalie" Nat "King" Cole's daughter is another performer whose follow-up is less satisfying than her 1975 hit. But Cole is than her 1975 hit. But Cole is a performer whose talents are deeper than most — I'd rank her as the most impressive new soul voice since Al Green — and her album has at least the requisite hit, "Sophisticated Laoy." There's still some growing going on here, not always in harow directions always in happy directions — some of this stuff is a little too sophisticated (at least for me) — but when it is complete, Cole will rank as a sudetachable frain. Crowning This beautiful picture, the bride chose a Juliet cap and four layer short veil with lace to match her gown. She carried a cascading bouquet of white orchids accented with yellow Sweetheart roses, nested in dainty baby's breath, leasher fern and lemon leaves. Matron of honour, Anna Balback, and bridesmalid Marilyn Praft and Mrs. Trudy Crook, were identically attired in full-length orange and belog printed organiza gowns with orange picture hats with white net frim. They carriedbaskets of yellow daisles and orange baby's breath. Flower girts, Tina and Jenny Pringle, were adorable in their yellow flocked voile gowns, and carried white Princess baskets of spring flowers. Ringbearer Nathan Balback was becomingly clad in a green velves suit with yellow shirt. The groom's boutonniere was a veltow rose nestled in white carnations, and his attendants — best man Garry Stevens and ushers Eddie Crook and Ted Balback, looked great in their brown tuxedos with frilled beige shirts. The groom's boutonniere was a veltow rose nestled in white carnations, and his attendants had yellow carnation boutonnieres.

At the reception held in the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre, Mr. T. Nijman was Master of Ceremonis and Mr. Maurice Brown, Calgary, proposed the bridal toast. Teresa Joyce, dressed identically to the flowergirls, ably took charge of the Guest Book.

The mewlyweds are now making their home in Calgary.

Emigration of West Indians

Emigration of West Indians began to overtake immigration around the turn of the decade. Between 1971 and 1973, 9,000 West Indians came to Britain but 14,000 left, mostly for the islands. In 1974, the excess of departures over arrivals was 2,000. In 1975, a bad economic year for Britain, arrivals topped departures by 800 but most community leaders see that over the period 1969-73, 34,000 immigrants arrived from the West Indies and 40,000 emigrants left for the West Indies.
